Wojtek the Bear – a Syrian bear adopted by General Anders' army in Iran. He accompanied the soldiers throughout their entire military campaign. For formal reasons, he was enlisted as a private and after the Battle of Monte Cassino, he was promoted to the rank of corporal. Discharged in 1947, he lived in the Edinburgh ZOO until 1963.

Harambe – a gorilla from the Cincinnati ZOO. In 2016, a three-year-old boy fell into his enclosure. Fearing for the child's life, ZOO staff shot Harambe. Many people believe that this senseless death marked the beginning of the final downfall of human civilization, and things only got worse from there.

Laika – the first dog in space, who reached orbit aboard a spacecraft. Her flight served as one of the final tests before sending humans into space. In reality, Laika died seven hours after launch due to the cabin overheating.

Pepe the Frog – a friendly young character from the comic Boys Club, who liked to pee with his pants down to his ankles. He used to say, "Feels good, man," and became a meme expressing all kinds of emotions and a hate symbol.
